The Change of the Secretariat

The Secretariat of the Japanese Network of Museums for Peace was moved from Kyoto Museum for World Peace, Ritsumeikan University to the Center for Documenting the Tokyo Raids and War Damages.

Muse 17 in Japanese was published in June. It was printed and published at the Center for Documenting the Tokyo Raids and War Damages for the first time. This is all thanks to Mr. Masahiko Yamabe who was the former curator of the Kyoto Museum for World Peace, Ritsumeikan University and started to work at the Center of the Tokyo Raids and War Damages because he continues to work hard for the publication of Muse both in Japanese and English. The editors are Masahiko Yamabe, Kazuyo Yamane, Ikuro Anzai and Yeongwhan Kim. Kazuya Yasuda, Keiichirou Kaji, Eirko Ikeda, Kikiko Noma and Yoshitaka Iwamoto will cooperate with the management of the network.

The 6th Conference of Japanese Network of Museums for Peace

The 6th conference of Japanese Network of Museums for Peace will be held on November 11th and 12th from 13:00 to 17:00 and from 9:00 to 12:00 respectively at Waseda University in Shinjuku, Tokyo. To participate in the conference or to present a report, contact our executive office by the end of September. Time for presentation per person is 30 minutes. There will also be a discussion on the policy and management of Japanese Network of Museums for Peace. We appreciate your active participation.

Forgotten Women

Women's Active Museum On War and Peace
Director: Nishino Rumiko

Since 29 April 2006 Women's Active Museum On War and Peace has been presenting the third special exhibition entitled "Korean Comfort Women Left Behind", which focuses on the devastating post-war experience of Korean comfort women.

In the House of Nanum in Gwangju, Korea, live nine victims of Japanese military sex slavery, half of whom could only made it to their home and fifty years or more after the end of the war. They were brought to China to serve at wartime brothels by Imperial Japanese Army. When Japan was defeated, they were simply abandoned in China to suffer great hardship of finding a way of sustaining themselves in a foreign land.

Kim Sunok lived in Dongning in the north-eastern part of China with her Chinese husband until 2005. She said she had to marry a Chinese to make a living in a place where she did not know its geography, language and customs, and had no acquaintance to turn to for help.

Kim tried not to forget her mother tongue as her identity as Korean, but Ji Dori, another comfort woman living in the same district in China, completely forgot Korean language and can only communicate with the other returnees in Nanum in Chinese language.

Li Okseon, who fulfilled her dream of returning to her country in 2000, felt alienated not only from her hometown which had drastically changed since she left but also from her family members and relatives who find her past as a comfort woman disagreeable.

It is hoped that the exhibition will bring the public awareness that "comfort women" are not just a problem in time of war, and that their suffering continues to this day.

Oka Masaharu Memorial Nagasaki Peace Museum

Director: Yasunori Takazane

Students and tourists who visit our museum have been declining in number, but we are glad to say that there are more and more foreign visitors with a growing worldwide interest in peace museums. We are now planning the following exhibitions and activities which we hope will arouse both domestic and foreign interest in the peace movement.

(1) Film showing: "War That Was Not Taught: China"

The newest film of the "War That Was Not Taught" series will be shown on June 11th, followed by a lecture by Jin Takaiwa, the director of the film. Japanese people cannot have a shared historical perspective with Chinese people without knowing the atrocious Japanese military invasion of China. Topical subjects will also be discussed such as Prime Minister's visit to Yasukuni Shrine, overseas deployment of Self-Defence Forces, and the amendment of the Basic Education Law and the Constitution.

(2) Unit 731 Exhibition

With Unit 731 War Crime Museum in China (with which our museum formed partnerships last September) as a co-sponsor, we are currently planning a special exhibition on Unit 731 from July 7th to 17th and memorial lectures on July 9th by Wang Peng, curator of Unit 731 War Crime Museum and Tsuneishi Keiichi, professor of Kanagawa University. The main contents of the exhibition are "Ishii Notes" and secret documents of the American Congress on the exemption of liability applied to Unit 731.

(3) Dispatch of goodwill envoys to China

Since we formed an affiliation with Nan Jing Massacre Memorial Museum in 2000, we have been dispatching two students selected through open call every summer. This year our envoys, together with goodwill emissaries of Meishinkai, will visit Beijing, Nan Jing, and Tian Jin in August. They will attend the inauguration of Memorial House For The Champions Of The Anti-Japanese Movement in Tian Jin, and are expected to learn more about our history through the displays and testimonies of those kidnapped by the Japanese Army. The exchange of opinions with students in Nan Jing University and Nan Jing Normal University will be a good occasion to push forward an effort to bridge the divide between China and Japan.

(4) Visit to Unit 731 War Crime Museum

We are planning to go on a trip to Shenyang and Halpin in September. Participants will be solicited from the public. The purpose of the trip is to see the traces of damage caused by Japanese invasion and to strengthen the friendly ties with Unit 731 War Crime Museum. (Gao Shi)

Grassroots House: Kochi

Secretary-General: Yeongwhan Kim

On December 10th, 2005, a peace movement group "Wind for peace" held a meeting entitled "There is no national border for life" inviting Takato Naoko, a volunteer activist working for the reconstruction of Iraq, as a guest speaker. She calmly delivered a report on the present situation in Iraq for about two hours.

More than 900 people attended the meeting, half of which were young people. They responded the speech saying "I learned what is really going on in Iraq", or "Watching shocking pictures and learning facts which have never been reported by Japanese media, I am now convinced that war is evil", or "The government should draw the Self-defense Forces from Iraq", or "The U. S. must go out of Iraq".

"Wind for Peace" is a group whose office is in Grassroots House, and most of its members are students. (The name "Wind for Peace" is derived from late Nishimori Shigeo's poem.) Fifty members had worked for the preparation of this meeting, and there was a lot of donation from people who were impressed with their enthusiasm. Ms. Takatou said "I have never seen so many people work for my speech, and I have never seen so many people come to hear me."

The hall of Grassroots House was refurbished as a concert hall last November, and live performance is being held once a month. Ms Mana Ando, producer of a live concert "Title of Mine" says: Why don't we change Grassroots House into a place where everyone can express themselves regardless of their skill of performance? That's how we started setting up these live concerts, and we are going to hold the forth concert soon. Many people gathered here who had never come to Grassroots House, and we met a lot of wonderful people. I always think that a live concert gives a rare and important occasion in which peace and war documents merge. I am proud to have created a new way of utilizing Peace Museum Hall and a new way of presenting, seeking, and feeling peace. I hope each one of us will do his/her best to nurture Grassroots House where we are encouraged to show creativity.

At the annual new-year social event, three senior members including Mr. Masahiro Okamura, the director of Grassroots House, talked to younger members about their personal histories, expectations to the younger generation and the importance of peace. Younger members gave musical performance and recited the Constitution. We are thinking of continuing this kind of event as a way of spreading peace movement from generation to generation.

Workshop on Bikini hydrogen bomb experiments and hearing investigation to the victims have started hosted by "Wind for Peace". On February 10th, the members of the workshop visited victims in Muroto and interviewed them.

The serial lectures which started in 2004 will be held on the following themes: "Invitation of the 44th infantry and vacation of land for the barracks", "War and life seen through the battle of Okinawa and Unit 731", "War relics in Kochi and Jejudo", "Vietnam War and handicapped people", "Peace education and art education", "Kou Makimura and anti-war movement in Kochi", "Globalization and anti-globalization of economy"

Grassroots House has been operating anti-war activities and musical performances to demand the withdrawal of Self-defense Forces from Iraq, liberation of Iraq from the occupation of the foreign forces every month on the first, second and third Friday from 17:00 to 19:00 and on the final Sunday from 14:00 to 16:00 at the north gate of Obiyamachi central park.

FIRST AUSTRIAN PEACE MUSEUM

Franz Deutsch

Leaflets for peace

Impulses for conversation: What is a Peace Museum? This often asked question tries to elicit a clearly circumscribed definition. The founding principles of the "FIRST AUSTRIAN PEACE MUSEUM" in Wolfsegg may serve as a guide in such an endeavour:

1. A Peace Museum gives impulses to think about the senselessness of war or belligerence on a personal level, and invites discussion.

2. A Peace Museum is a communication centre for people who are interested in the advancement of peace in small and large communities, and who are willing to make a personal contribution to it.

3. A Peace Museum is a school for the research project:

"Where and when does war start? Where does peace begin?"

To satisfactorily answer these questions there is a great need for EDUCATION FOR PEACE.

4. Peace Museums whose final aim is to evolve into a global network, are the homes for a worldwide "SOCIETY FOR THE FRIENDS OF PEACE", yet to be created.

Generally speaking, the inherent risk of "definitions" is that they may not be all-encompassing and could somehow put limits to the further development of a given subject. This applies particularly to IDEAS and their development through new insight. With regard to Peace Museum, its definition is not meant to be a corset, but merely a term of reference (or thinking point).

There are museums which partially function as "PEACE MUSEUMS", like the Ghandi Museum, the Holocaust Museum, the Anne Frank House, the Jägerstätter House, and others. These museums are very appropriately called "Peace Related Museums"; they fulfill an important duty and belong to the growing family of Peace Museums.

In this "eleventh hour" mankind's greatest concern is not only the prevention of war, but to make life livable in the next millennium. It makes sense, therefore, to include all institutions and associations, which are dedicated to this task, in the great family of Peace Museums – Amnesty International, Greenpeace, World-Wildlife-Fund, Red Cross, the Nobel Institute, and others. I am convinced that only grand ideas will sustain our hope for the continued existence of our wonderful world!

The Best in Heritage - Dubrovnik: Croatia

Under the patronage of ICOM, UNESCO (ROSTE), Europa Nostra, ICOMOS and City of Dubrovnik, International heritage forum "The Best in Heritage" DUBROVNIK, CROATIA 21-23 September 2006 (5th year)

To the Chairmen/Chairwomen and members of International and National Committees of ICOM and ICOMOS,
UNESCO and Europa Nostra

To the representatives and curators and other staff of the museum, conservation or heritage organisations

To the friends of museums and heritage
Zagreb / Dubrovnik - April 2006

Dear colleagues,

"THE BEST IN HERITAGE" is a major international forum which provides a promotional spotlight on the most professionally creative and educational heritage developments all over the world.
Each year we provide an international showcase and presentation forum for twenty award-winning and innovative projects, and present them to the wider professional public and the international media. It is a unique gathering of heritage expertise and international exchange of ideas. This is not a competition. We do not evaluate these projects or give prizes - we just present their excellence and share it with about 120 interested and ambitious colleagues from some 30 countries.

The participants took the opportunity to see the latest developments and hear the latest thinking on the public presentation of all aspects of heritage in the community. The projects presented are representatives of the best work in museums, art galleries, landscape interpretation, historic buildings... We cover all aspects of heritage communication and care, presentation and publication. Our web site, the only of the kind in the World, receives more than 55 000 visits a year.

In keeping with the principal concern of our excellent patrons, we feel that the results of major creative achievements in heritage field deserve further attention and wider dissemination as learning "by the power of example". The Best in Heritage event is held every September in the beautiful and historic city of Dubrovnik (UNESCO World Heritage Site).

This year we shall celebrate the fifth anniversary. Many important colleagues already promised to come. The enchanting Dubrovnik will thus be a perfect setting to celebrate excellence of invited projects as well as the 60th anniversary of ICOM. The party will take place on 21st September, and we hope to have many of you with us.

To obtain further information, or to book your place, please visit our web site:

www.TheBestInHeritage.com

The new DVD interactive edition of The Best in Heritage event has been published. It contains full-time presentations as well as additional materials from the last year event. Our DVD is, we firmly believe, an extraordinary teaching tool and a very useful insight into the contemporary quality practice and theory of our growing profession(s). More about DVD you could find at www.heritage.novena.hr

We look forward to seeing you in Dubrovnik in September. Those who come regularly already know: Same time, same place, different excellence!

The International Red Cross and Red Crescent Museum: Geneva

Situated in the midst of the international organizations, for which Geneva is so famous, the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Museum is a unique place where acts of solidarity are shown. In its modern and symbolic architecture, visitors are invited to learn at first hand about the fascinating history of the first humanitarian organization. Photographs, films, texts and objects enable visitors to understand better humanitarian action and cast a critical glance at the evolution of conflicts and catastrophes in a historical and modern perspective.

From 13 September 2006 to 28 January 2007, the Museum presents an exhibition entitled Cambodia, 1975-1979: Chronicle of genocide.

The entry of Vietnamese troops into Phnom Penh in January 1979 ended the Khmer Rouge regime which had cost the lives of 1.7 million Cambodians, nearly a quarter of the country's population in 1975.

More than twenty years later, the surviving perpetrators of this genocide have not yet been brought to justice. However, political developments in recent years have given rise to the hope of a trial being organized. Supported by the international community, measures designed to bring those responsible before a court of justice should materialize in 2007.

Conceived by the Lyons Centre for the History of the Resistance and Deportation and adapted by the Museum, this exhibition gives an account of the genocide committed by the Khmer Rouge and examines its impact on contemporary Cambodian society. Through ethnic objects and photographic records, it presents the historical and cultural context in which the events took place. It also reviews the circumstances which allowed the Khmer Rouge to take power in April 1975 and examines the new regime and its underlying ideology, before focusing more closely on its tragic consequences.

Finally, the exhibition covers the overthrow of the regime by the Vietnamese in 1979 and its consequences for Cambodia, an account which analyses the difficulties in bringing to justice those responsible for the genocide. This impunity and its impact on the victims lie at the heart of the film S-21, the Khmer Rouge Killing Machine (2002), a documentary by the Cambodian filmmaker Rithy Panh, which forms the last part of the exhibition.

Italy

The inauguration of a 'Peace House' [Casa per la Pace] called La Filanda, in Casalecchio di Reno, very near Bologna, was a great success. The programme was spread out over three days, 17th-19th March, and several hundred people participated.

The new peace centre is supported by the city and is managed by a local voluntary association, called 'Percorsi di Pace' (Paths to peace), which has been in existence for ten years. The new centre now houses also Vittorio's International Peace Posters Documentation Centre. A special exhibition of 50 posters on peace archives, peace houses, peace documentation centres, peace laboratories, peace museums, peace schools, peace universities/departments was inaugurated there, and will be displayed for several weeks.

The building used to be a textile mill; only one part has survived, and this has been nicely restored and is now the peace house. There are two large rooms, and then offices, a fair trade shop, etc. The mayor and also the provincial governor gave speeches, as well as leading Italian peace activists.

It was a full and varied programme, which kept us very busy. If you would like more information, you can contact Vittorio: vittoriopallotti@libero.it

"The White Rose" Exhibition in Germany

Mitsuo Nakamura

The White Rose was an anti-Nazi movement group in Germany, famous for distributing six different leaflets in which they called for an active opposition to the Nazi regime between 1942 to 1943. The key members of the group were Hans Scholl and his younger sister Sophie. In February 1943, the brother and sister threw leaflets at the atrium of Munich University and were arrested on the spot to be executed four days later.

At present, the square where the central hall of Munich University is located has been named "Geschwister-Scholl-Platz" after Hans and Sophie Scholl, and the square next to it "Professor-Huber-Platz" after Prof. Kurt Huber, a White Rose collaborator. On the stone pavements of the squares were implanted White Rose leaflets as though they have just been thrown away. At one corner of the atrium where the Scholl siblings distributed leaflets is a monument to the White Rose, on which the names of those who participated in the group and were later executed were inscribed. At the back of this monument is White Rose Memorial Room where the White Rose Foundation displays exhibitions. The foundation was established in 1987 by the surviving members of the group for the purpose of giving the true picture of the White Rose which has often been distorted and misrepresented.

The exhibition by the White Rose Foundation has been traveling throughout Japan since last year and is planned to be displayed at International Christian University in May.

The U.S.A.

The following article is from Mr. Gerald Elfendahl, the former director of History Museum in Bainbridge Island, Washington, USA. This makes Japanese people of Japan's war responsibility.

Here is a copy of the declaration of apology. It was written by a special committee of the Greater Seattle Council of Churches and presented to Native American leaders at a special ceremony held on Thanksgiving Day weekend in 1987 in Seattle: The ceremony was held at the corner of Seneca St. and Second Ave., a site that was once a Native burial ground before newcomers came to the land. Ted George, a Suquamish elder, long time friend and neighbor, was on the committee and provided our history group a copy for our book. It is a powerful document. On the 150th anniversary of this little mission church which today sits beside Chief Seattle's grave, the Archbishop of the Seattle Archdiocese gave a wonderful speech which I also transcribed and could share with you if interested.

I hope you enjoy this document. It was used by first peoples all over the planet to help heal old social wounds. It or a similar copy of it ended up at the United Nations, I was told.

"A PUBLIC DECLARATION TO THE TRIBAL COUNCILS AND TRADITIONAL SPIRITUAL LEADERS OF THE INDIAN AND ESKIMO PEOPLES OF THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST:
c/o Jewell Praying Wolf James, Lummi

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

This is a formal apology on behalf of our churches for their long-standing participation in the destruction of traditional Native American spiritual practices. We call upon our people for recognition of and respect for your traditional ways of life and for protection of your sacred places and ceremonial objects. We have frequently been unconscious and insensitive and not come to your aid when you have been victimized by unjust Federal policies and practices. In many other circumstances we reflected the rampant racism and prejudice of the dominant culture with which we too willingly identified. During this 200th Anniversary year of the United States Constitution we, as leaders of our churches in the Pacific Northwest, extend our apology. We ask for your forgiveness and blessing.

As the Creator continues to renew the earth, the plants, the animals and all living things, we call upon the people of our denominations and fellowships to a commitment of mutual support in your efforts to reclaim and protect the legacy of your traditional spiritual teachings. To that end we pledge our support and assistance in upholding the American Religious Freedom Act (Public Law 95-134, 1978) and within that legal precedent affirm the following:

- (1) The rights of the Native Peoples to practice and participate in traditional ceremonies and rituals with the same protection offered all religions under the Constitution,
- (2) Access to and protection of sacred sites and public lands for ceremonial purposes, (and)
- (3) The use of religious symbols (feathers, tobacco, sweet grass, bone, etc.) for use in traditional ceremonies and rituals.

The spiritual power of the land and the ancient wisdom of your indigenous religions can be, we believe, great gifts to the Christian churches. We offer our commitment to support you in the righting of previous wrongs; to protect your people's efforts to enhance Native spiritual teachings; to encourage the members of our churches to stand in solidarity with you on these important religious issues; to provide advocacy and mediation, when appropriate, for ongoing negotiations with State agencies and Federal officials regarding these matters.

May the promises of this day go on public record with all the congregations of our communions and be communicated to the native American Peoples of the Pacific Northwest. May the God of Abraham and Sarah, and the Spirit who lives in both the cedar and Salmon People, be honored and celebrated.
Sincerely,

(Signed: 1987)

Peace Movie: the U.S.A.

Modern Warfare (300 dpi attached) is one of the images featured in movie: Who's Telling our Story?

- J. Kadir Cannon, American artist and peace activist, to present peace movie at World Friendship Center, Hiroshima, Japan and Memorial Hall, Peace Museum, Hiroshima, Japan
- Susan Gelber Cannon, peace educator, to speak on American peace education strategies

Date: Saturday, April 15,

Time: 2-4 pm

Place: World Friendship Center, Hiroshima

Date: Sunday, April 16, 2006

Time: 4-5 pm

Place: Memorial Hall, Peace Museum, Hiroshima

J. Kadir Cannon, American artist and political activist, will present his 31-minute movie, Who's Telling Our Story? at Hiroshima's World Friendship Center and at Memorial Hall, Hiroshima's Peace Museum on April 15 and 16. A nationally shown artist in the United States, Kadir Cannon's live narrative performance with words and images depicts the horror and futility of war and urges viewers to "abandon the myth of militarism and embrace the paradigm of peace." The movie, which premiered at Wilmington College's Westheimer Peace Symposium in Ohio has also been shown in movie theatres and colleges in the United States.

In addition to the presentations in Hiroshima, Cannon will present his peace movie in Kyoto and Toyohashi, Japan, as well as in Beijing and Shanghai, China. In Asia, Cannon and his wife Susan, a middle school teacher, will collaborate with Asian artists and educators on peace projects during the months of April, May, and June, 2006. In Toyohashi, Japan, on April 23, the couple will join with American and Japanese artists to create the Toyohashi Station International Peace Project, using masks, banners, poetry, and public participation.

Susan Gelber Cannon, an American educator with over 25 years of classroom experience in elementary and middle school, will speak about her methods of "educating for peace in a culture of war" in the United States and will introduce the issues raised by the movie. Susan Cannon's special fields of interest are moral, global, and peace education: developing teaching methods to help children to think, care, and act honorably and globally. Currently on sabbatical, she teaches history and English, as well as debate and other elective courses at The Episcopal Academy, a college preparatory independent school near Philadelphia, PA, in the United States. Cannon has also taught middle school students and teachers in Yangzhou and Rugao, China, in Jiangsu Province. She has given numerous teacher workshops and public presentations in the United States as well.

The son of a Manhattan Project physicist, artist J. Kadir Cannon, uses the work of his father on the atomic bomb in World War II and his father's subsequent efforts to guard against military use of the bomb, to inspire his own efforts to promote peace among the citizens of the world. Like many American scientists in 1945, Vernon Cannon believed the development of atomic power would both defeat Hitler and create an unlimited energy supply for the planet. To his horror, and to the shame of himself and that of many of his scientific colleagues, the bomb was used instead by the American military on civilian targets in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan. Vernon Cannon was one of the first scientists to become active in early efforts to avert a nuclear arms race. His son, Kadir Cannon, working with his wife Susan, comes to Japan with the desire to build bonds of global citizenship. They hope to learn from the citizens of Hiroshima about the devastating effects of nuclear weapons, as well as to engage in dialogue with artists, educators, and other citizens about the best methods for members of the world community to promote peace education and to work for lasting peace.

At the events in Hiroshima, Kadir Cannon's art images will be on display at. These images are seen in his movie and in his anti-war art series, Anguished Art: Outcries for Peace. Visit www.jkadircannon.com to learn more about Kadir Cannon's artwork and movie. See Susan Cannon's pages at The Episcopal Academy, Merion, PA (U.S.A.) to learn more about her teaching initiatives at http://www.ea1785.org/Eax_FacultyPage.aspx?euid=1000

A Plea for Peace from Americans and Japanese Working Together

April 23, 2006

Toyohashi Station, Toyohashi, Japan

Toyohashi Station International Peace Project

As Americans and as Japanese we have watched in horror as the United States has chosen the path of nationalism and imperialism and pre-emptive war. Japan took the path of militarism in the past, especially in the 1930s and 1940s. Today, it seems that forces of militarism are moving to change Japan's peaceful constitution. Consider these beautiful words of Article Nine:

Aspiring sincerely to an international peace based on justice and order, the Japanese people forever renounce war as a sovereign right of the nation and the threat or use of force as a means of settling international disputes.

In order to accomplish the aim of the preceding paragraph, land, sea, and air forces, as well as other war potential, will never be maintained. The right of belligerency of the state will not be recognized.

This guiding principle should be the policy of the United States and Japan and of all countries.

We humbly plead that the Japanese people and the American people will choose a peaceful relationship with the rest of the world. It will be we common people who can change and redirect the leaders who are going in the wrong direction.

As citizens of the world, may we reject the ways of nationalism, imperialism, and militarism that harm the human family. May we join together in every country teach our children the ways of peace, respect, cooperation, and peaceful co-existence.

Vote for a peaceful Japan. Work for peace.

Vote for a peaceful United States. Work for peace.

Work for peace in all the world.

The Dayton Peace Museum: USA

The Dayton Peace Museum is trying mass media as a way to promote a culture of peace in the greater Dayton area. As part of the "Season for Nonviolence", January 30 – April 4, 2006, the Peace Museum will display images of peace on four 12' X 25' billboards in the Dayton area. The billboards, which go up February 15th, will display messages of nonviolence from famous peace advocates Dr. Martin L. King Jr., Mother Teresa, Gandhi, and Albert Einstein. They will give citizens a moment to reflect on something other than the violent images they face every day, a different way of looking at the world. Photos of the billboards are at the following web pages:

GandhiServe Foundation

About GandhiServe Foundation

GandhiServe, a charitable foundation registered in Germany, aims to spread the ethics of nonviolence by disseminating information about and popularizing Mahatma Gandhi’s life and works.

GandhiServe Foundation hopes to help alleviate conflicts and inspire others through making available media and resources on Gandhi’s life and thoughts.

We believe firmly that Gandhi's message of truth, love and nonviolence is still relevant today. Or even more relevant than ever before, considering the ecological catastrophe we're facing, and the increase of different forms of violence in both personal and public life. The ethics of nonviolence, as practiced and cultivated by Mahatma Gandhi, live on, regardless of national or political boundaries.

The Foundation

The GandhiServe Foundation is a foundation registered in Berlin/Germany. The foundation received charitable status as per §5 - 1, No.9, KStG - Germany.

Extract from the constitution:

§ 2 - 1: The purpose of the foundation is the promotion of science, cultural and historical research, and education.

§ 2 - 2: The purpose is achieved by:

1. Execution and financial support of both academic and non-academic research projects that identify and conserve original documents on and by Mahatma Gandhi.
2. Execution and financial support of such educational projects which propagate peace, the ethics of nonviolence and the memory of Mahatma Gandhi and his teaching.

The GandhiServe Foundation is a member of the Federal Association of German Foundations.

Publications

The Journal of Stellar Peacemaking

The Journal of Stellar Peacemaking (JSP) is produced and maintained for dissemination of information about peace development. Research in peace through education and other processes provides the foundation for this publication. The goal of this journal is provision of free information about processes which have resulted with positive peace. Global, regional, interpersonal and intrapersonal conflicts which have been transformed or resolved for the benefit of everyone involved is regarded here as positive peace.

Mission

The read-for-free Journal of Stellar Peacemaking (JSP) is intended for practitioners, researchers and other learners of peace development. In their service, this journal provides information about the design, use and analysis of human efforts to bring about peace in their region, this world and our galaxy.

JSP is also a celebration of the stellar and diverse ways that people have been building peace anywhere it is, or might be, lost. The commitment to peace preservation through compassion, courage and creativity that is evident in the true stories that JSP publishes are the foundations of peacemaking that can be learned as well as celebrated with this journal.

Comments on Muse by Dr. Peter van den Dungen

It is always a pleasure to receive Muse - every issue brings interesting and encouraging news of developments in the field of peace museums and peace exhibitions in Japan. It seems that in your country the movement to create new peace museums is as strong as ever - whereas in much of the rest of the world no similar developments are taking place.

Everyone who is interested in peace education - and particularly in peace museums and exhibitions as popular instruments for the promotion of peace is greatly indebted to you for all your hard work, over many years already, for producing Muse on a regular basis, and to do so in both Japanese and English editions. Muse is doubtlessly playing a vital role in maintaining and strengthening the network of Japanese museums for peace. And thanks to the fact that Muse is also appearing in English, those outside Japan who are interested in peace museums do not remain ignorant of information which is of great interest to them.

Now that the newsletter of the International Network of Museums for Peace is no longer appearing, I hope that network members, and readers of Muse, will send you their news items for inclusion in Muse (space permitting, of course!).

I hope that also in the future you will continue to find the time and energy to edit Muse; please know there is an appreciative and grateful readership around the world.

(Thank you so much for the encouraging comments.)

Editors' Notes

We'd like to express our deepest gratitude to Mr. Im Cheong Jun who started to translate Muse Newsletter from Japanese into English and vice versa as a volunteer. It takes so much time, energy and patience to translate both Muse newsletters.
